The calendar grid consists of 7 columns representing the days of the week (2 | 12 to 2 | 18) and 24 rows representing hours. The header row is shaded blue for 2 | 12, 2 | 13, 2 | 17, and 2 | 18, and grey for 2 | 14, 2 | 15, and 2 | 16. The body of the grid is composed of a dotted pattern. A solid vertical line is positioned between the header and the grid, and solid horizontal lines are at the top and bottom of the grid. There are solid dots at the intersections of the vertical line and the horizontal lines.

A large grid for weekly planning. The grid consists of 7 columns, each representing a day from Monday to Sunday. Each column contains 60 rows of empty space. A dotted horizontal line runs across each row, approximately two-thirds of the way down. A solid horizontal line runs across each row, approximately one-third of the way down. The top row of the grid is the header row with the days of the week.
